Poll #2

- How effective is your organization in reacting to the results of employee surveys?
 - ☐ I see definite changes
 - ☐ Employee Engagement
 - ☐ Both Satisfaction and Engagement
 - ☐ We don't perform employee surveys

Address Both Engagement & Satisfaction

- Career Development and opportunity are key drivers in both satisfaction and engagement
 - Opportunity to develop new skills and knowledge
 - While promotions are great, providing opportunities to expand expertise, learn about new areas of the company, etc can be strong motivators
- Clear, consistent expectations are also key
 - What is expected of me, how will I be measured and judged?
 - How does what I am doing help the bottom line of the organization?
- Feedback from Managers in the moment
 - Balance feedback acknowledging accomplishments and providing coaching

Implications of Talent Management Technology

- Talent Management technology provides a framework to capture and measure the behaviors and activities that can drive employee engagement
 - Are managers providing feedback?
 - Do employees have goals?
- Can an extrapolation be made between managers who exhibit the behaviors that drive employee engagement and managers with highly engaged workforces?

Survey or Pulse?

- Most organizations measure engagement and/or satisfaction through annual surveys; then develop an action plan to address
- Similar to Performance Management 365, could technology facilitate more frequent measurements, even predictive reporting that would yield stronger results?

Summary

- Engagement and Satisfaction are both important but satisfaction without engagement will have less impact on the business results
- There is an opportunity to start thinking about engagement and satisfaction as living, breathing processes with measurements throughout the year
